The shiny instruments in the car attracted Robert's attention. He played with them for a while. Came a click and the emergency brake was released.

For two blocks the car dashed madly down one of the city's steepest hills. After an narrow escape from crashing into a telephone pole, the machine finally came to a halt in the yard of the Franklin Morris home on Loring avenue. Forty feet further and the car would have crashed over an embankment.

When excited witnesses reached the scene, they found Robert seated behind the wheel of the machine, perfectly happy. He was unharmed and had a chuckle as greeting to his rescuers.

NORTHCOTT IN SANITY MOVE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—The possibility that Gordon Sewart Northcott would use insanity in an attempt to escape the gallows for the asserted murder of four southern California youths broached today.

His attorney, Norbert Savoy, let it be known that relatives and other intimates of the accused youth were being questioned regarding his earlier life.

Savoy first interviewed Northcott's mother, Mrs. Sarah L. Northcott who arrived at Riverside from Canada today. He refused to divulge whether this meeting supplied him with any support for an insanity defense.

The state anticipated such a defense and prominent alienists examined the defendant this week.

Judge Denies Venue Change In Theft Case

BRENTWOOD, Dec. 8.—Justice of the Peace Robert Wallace today denied a motion by P. B. Cassidy, 27, and George Prather, 24, for a change of place of trial on charges of petty theft against them. The two were charged with stealing 54 bales of hay from the D. D. Watson ranch at Brentwood. Cassidy and Prather were convicted in Judge Wallace's court, but charged bias of court officers and the community in seeking a change of venue.

Conviction of the pair was set aside when Judge Wallace sustained a contention by Attorney T. D. Johnston that the jury had been improperly impeached.

Trial will be held on Dec. 19.

She declared that the main purpose of the Campfire girls is to keep the girls in the home, busy, contented and better future citizens and housewives.

DOCTORS NOT TO OPERATE ON KING

LONDON, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Lord Dawson of Penna, physician in ordinary to the King, told the United Press tonight that the King is holding his own against his illness and in the last 24 hours his progress has been on the upgrade.

There would be no object in an operation, he said.

Lord Dawson emphasized his desire for a cessation of "alarmist rumors" circulating in the United States and for that reason agreed to authorize a statement of facts.

It was the first occasion that any of the King's doctors have authorized a direct quotation.

"There has been localized infection in the lung which must make slow, laborious progress towards repair."

Further in this stage of the illness there must be an ebb and flow upgrade and downgrade, and (Continued on Page 8)

Newspaperman, Famous Pilot In Death Dive

LONG BEACH, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Three persons were killed late today when an airplane crashed from an altitude of 1500 feet at the edge of the municipal airport here. The plane went into a nose dive when a wing collapsed, witnesses said.

Hoover Greeted On Arrival In Chile

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile, Dec. 8.—(U.P.)—Herbert Hoover, president-elect of the United States, paused here for a few hours today and greeted Bolivia, represented by an official party which came down from La Paz to meet the U. S. S. Maryland.

She left later in the day for Valparaiso, possibly the last port of call for the Maryland. Should the trans-Andean railway be blocked by recent landslides, the Maryland may have to carry Mr. Hoover and his party through the Straits of Magellan and on up the east coast to Buenos Aires.

Alberto Palacios, Bolivian foreign minister, officially greeted Mr. Hoover. Palacios told the president-elect that his visit had established a moment of historical greatness in the fraternal relations of the Americas. New rules of common comprehension and understanding in the spiritual aspirations and national interests of the countries involved would be accomplished, he said.

"Bolivia only aspires to the opportunities other countries enjoy without detriment to sister countries," Palacios said.

Mr. Hoover replied to the greeting in that friendly manner that has been a revelation to many who have followed his Latin-American statesmanship with interest.

The other followed a 42-yard run by Thomas, Tornado halfback.

HOME EDUCATION GROWS MORE GENERAL

Home education has always been more important than most of us have realized. Many of our great men have been compelled to depend on it, notably among them being Abraham Lincoln, James A. Garfield and Andrew Johnson, three distinguished men who rose to the presidency of the United States. Home education is becoming more general every year as its facilities increase and more people unable to go to school are coming to depend on home study. Under the title "Education Lights the Way," A. A. Miller has an interesting and convincing study of home education in the current issue of the National Republic. In part Mr. Miller says:

"Education is a lamp whose light has made America the land of opportunity. Following that light million born on American soil, and other millions born across the seas, who came to these shores to enjoy equal opportunity, have marched together along the dark trail of hard work to the broad, sun splashed meadows of success and happiness. For America, education is equal opportunity in practice; and it is because the lamp of knowledge burns more brightly today than ever before, that there are more opportunities to achieve success than at any other period in the history of the United States.

"Opportunity to acquire knowledge without regard to class, creed or color has produced remarkable results in America. It has taken an obscure Ohio lad without financial resources and placed him among the greatest inventive geniuses of all time, until today the name of Edison is known to all the world. A penniless German boy, landing on our shores in his late teens spent long wearisome hours beneath the lamp of knowledge and some years later we know him as Charles P. Steinmetz, the great electrical wizard of the General Electric company. The light of that lamp has produced great literary giants like Emerson, Whitman, and Mark Twain; and industrial wizards like Ford and Rockefeller and Schwab. From beneath its protective glow, men like Lincoln and Roosevelt and Wilson have stepped out into the arena of public affairs to lead the nation into paths of greatness.

"The United States has grown in wealth in proportion to her ever widening facilities for the diffusion of education. Today the lamp of knowledge sheds its light along the highways and byways all over the land. From 82 at the dawn of the nineteenth century, the number of days the average American goes to school has increased to 1400. Within recent years the increasing industrialization of our country has made specialized training an essential qualification for success in many lines of endeavor. Abundant opportunities to achieve success were made possible to those who extended their education beyond the school-house and carried it over into everyday life in the office, factory and mine. These new possibilities are being realized today by directed home study, conducted under the direction of the modern correspondence school."

It is said that Aviator Levine has been delayed on his flights across the Atlantic by being unable to decide where to start from. The trouble with most fliers is finding the proper place to land on.

Now that the campaign is over we recall the fact that the only fellow who was not mentioned in it was General Apathy.

Dispatch from Brule says that President Coolidge has learned how to handle a canoe. We always supposed he was an artist at this occupation. At least we never knew him to rock the boat.

A New York woman accused of violating the Volstead Act routed three policemen trying to arrest her. Some of it is powerful stuff.

BEAUTY

My dear Miss Lane,

What is the easiest way of losing weight? I am about fifteen pounds heavier than I should be and would like to get down to normal. I'd appreciate any suggestions you can give me. J.

There is no "easiest" way of losing weight that I know of. If you want to take off fifteen pounds you can't be lazy about it. Get a diet book in which the number of calories contained in various foods are given and then eat only as much as is proper for your normal weight. Take long walks in the open air, eat rich foods of all kinds, and do your setting up exercises regularly every day.

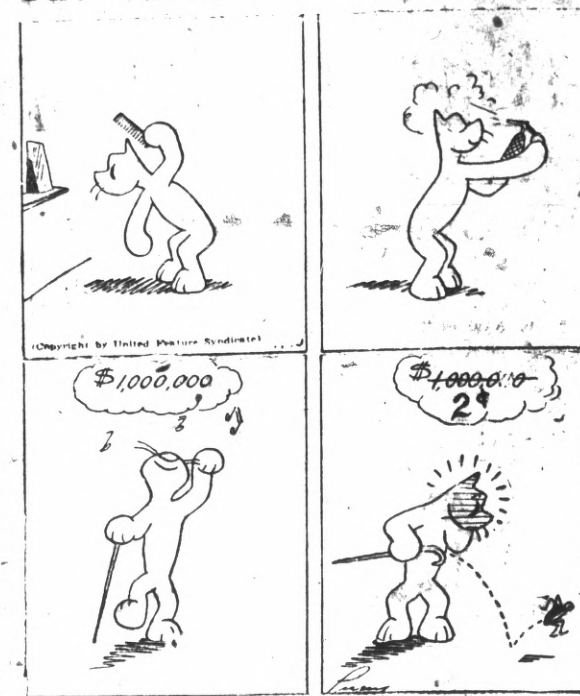

Dear Miss Lane,

Have you any remedy for honey is something quite distinguished in appearance. It is a well-fitted effect accentuated by piped seams. Gay chatz would be my suggestion to you and by running the gamut of color one could spring all manner of lovely surprises helpful perhaps in taking the mind of your boy friend from undone muffins or overdone chop.

Yours for Style, JUDIE.

There is no way of making thin hands fat except by adding weight generally, but nightly use of a nourishing skin food will help to keep them smooth and soft.

NEW BUICKS ON YOSEMITE JOURNEY

The lightest season for traffic into the famous Yosemite valley is in the late fall, according to Horace M. Albright, supervisor of Yellowstone and Yosemite National parks and assistant to S. T. Mather, director of National parks.

Albright declares this is the time of year when artists delight in roaming about the valley, enjoying the varied coloring of the trees and shrubbery and the beautiful sunsets and cloud effects that prevail much of the time through October, November and December.

The park official was recently in Yosemite on an official visit when 27 of the new model Buicks drove into the valley and out again the same day over the famous all-year highway which was completed nearly two years ago and which permits uninterrupted travel in and out of the valley regardless of weather conditions.

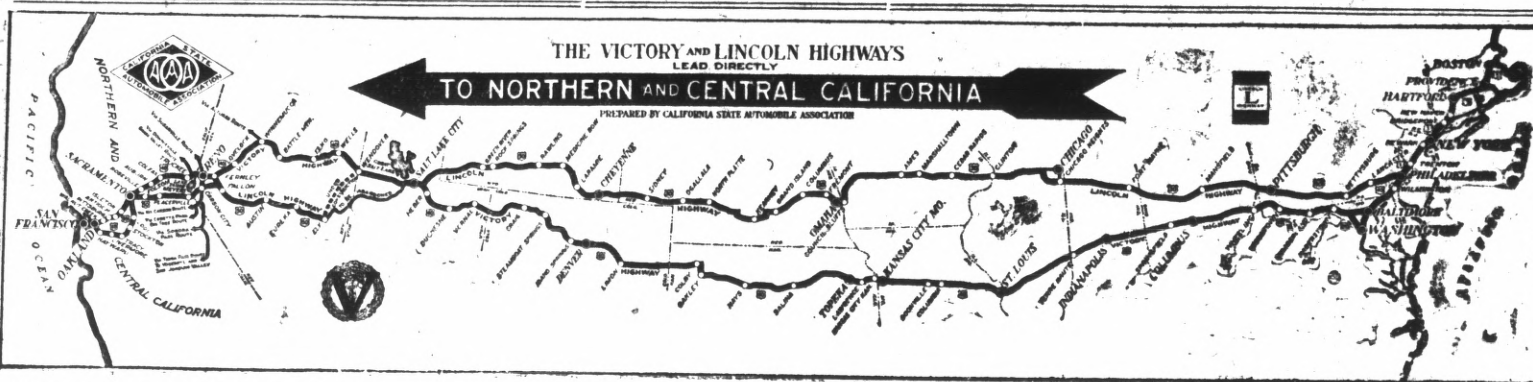

Lunch in Park
The new Buicks made the entire round trip of approximately 475 miles between daylight and dark. The party stopped at Merced, leaving there at 9 and arriving at the new million-dollar Alhambra hotel on the floor of the valley in plenty of time for lunch. The caravan left for home, at will, from two o'clock on, the last car bidding the valley farewell just about four o'clock.

While the falls are many of them dry in the late fall, and few are at anything like full volume, there is always a chance for at least a flurry of snow and the thermometer drops below freezing at night, necessitating the draining of radiators, hiking and horseback parties to various points of interest including the Wawona Big Tree grove, Glacier Point and over the Lodge Trail as of interest to the artistically inclined, while the amateur photographer has ample subjects for his camera. If he, or she, is sufficiently expert in the use of a color filter and panoramic plates of film will give the most beautiful of cloud effects and landscapes.

Wild Flowers
One of the most interesting features of the valley from the standpoint of the casual visitor is the effort being made by the Yosemite Park Carry company to promote the growth of typical California wild flowers. The entire open country of meadow, surrounding the Alhambra hotel, according to Don T. Frodsham, general manager of the company, has been planted with these wild flowers of more than a hundred varieties, which have been gathered from every part of the state from the High Sierras to the Mojave desert wastes. These it is expected will be in full bloom, most of them, during the coming summer, of course many of them will find the weather conditions somewhat changed from their home district and it will be interesting to note the change in blossom time that this change will effect.

An interesting freak of floral nature was noted by Albright

Right Into The Heart Of California

NEW CHEVROLET MODELS ON DISPLAY

MAP TO ASSIST IN DRAWING TOURISTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—The formal presentation of the new Chevrolet six cylinder line, opened here for the first time today at noon. Preparations for the exhibit were handled by the Chevrolet officials in charge of the San Francisco zone. It is the only opportunity that the people of San Francisco and northern California will have to see the new line of Chevrolet sixes before deliveries begin January first, and record breaking crowds of visitors are anticipated.

Northern California's introduction to the new Chevrolet line is in Larkin hall, Civic auditorium, and will last six days, from today until Thursday inclusive. The doors are open every day from 10:30 a. m. until midnight.

The display is being conducted in customary automobile show style, except that there is no admission charge. Each model in the line is on view—coach, convertible landau sedan, coupe, sport cabriolet, sedan, phaeton and roadster. The auditorium will be especially decorated for the occasion. Each model is placed so that it may be viewed from all angles and permit a thorough inspection.

Incidental to the presentation of the new line there is an interesting mechanical exhibit, including a complete passenger car chassis. Throughout the day a Chevrolet factory expert, speaking through an amplifier describes the improved mechanical features of the new car and relates interesting details regarding the development of the new engine.

Motion pictures of General Motors proving ground, the 1245 acre outdoor laboratory, where during a four year period, Chevrolet engineers tested 100 six cylinder engines prior to giving their approval to the new six, is being shown at all hours throughout the exhibition.

Many Improvements

Aside from the unusually large number of mechanical improvements which the new Chevrolet six incorporates, improvements which set new performance standards with an economy averaging better than 20 miles to the gallon, visitors to the Chevrolet advance showing will be impressed with the beauty of the new line.

Fisher body designers working in close cooperation with Chevrolet officials, have succeeded in characterizing the new models with an attractiveness of line and color hitherto unknown to the low priced field. Each model has its own color combination, chosen with care to harmonize with the type of car it enhances. Distinctively grouped hood louvers, placed toward the rear of the hood, add to the smartness of the long, unbroken lines.

Well Appointed

The appointments too, are drawing much favorable comment. They are the richest and most luxurious ever offered by Chevrolet. The seats are wider and more restful. The driver's seat in all closed models is easily adjustable, forward or back, a feature recently introduced in a few of the high priced cars. The re-designed dash carries an attractive grouping of all control instruments, indirectly lighted, including the new water temperature indicator. Rich, long-wearing upholstery and specially designed Turnsted hardware are other comfort and appearance

A pictorial map showing the direct transcontinental route leading to northern and central California and describing the scenic and historic attractions of these main arteries, has been published by the California State Automobile association. This map will be given nation-wide distribution in a campaign for increased motor tourist travel over the Victory and Lincoln highways during the 1929 touring season.

Through its affiliation with the American Automobile association the association has direct service relations with 1,075 A. A. automobile clubs blanketing the United States.

Twenty thousand copies of this map have been printed and other thousands will be available for distribution through touring bureaus, chambers of commerce and other travel directing agencies with the opening of the 1929 touring season, Californians, Inc., will likewise assist in distribution.

This map is supplemented by detailed road maps marked for mileage, detours, etc., and will be available at touring bureau counters of each of the 1,075 affiliated A. A. clubs which constitute the travel directing agencies of the great bulk of forty million motorists who become motor tourists each year.

The Automobile Association has been an active factor in securing united efforts to have these two routes placed in travelable condition in the west so that both the Victory and Lincoln highways would be available to this section of California. It sponsored the raising of funds which resulted in completion of the Vandover Cut-off which carries travel over both routes east of Salt Lake City across the great salt marsh area which had long existed as a barrier to transcontinental travel. Last year saw completion of the Victory highway in Nevada and as the western headquarters of the Victory Highway association, the association is leading a movement to secure Federal maintenance assistance in keeping this section of the Victory route at a high standard of improvement. The long standing controversy that left uncompleted a section of the Lincoln Highway in eastern Nevada and western Utah was settled through conferences called by the Automobile association and the compromise effected will soon become a reality.

Use Low Gear To Climb Hill

Shift to second gear when your car is climbing a long grade. The Free emergency road service of the California State Automobile association points out that you can often travel faster in lower gear and the strain on the motor when pulling hard in any gear is severe.

Drivers Told To Inspect Car Tools

Inspection of tools in your car before starting on a long trip should include the tire pump and jack, suggests the Free emergency road service of the California State Automobile association. The pump may dry out from lack of use and a little oil or grease should be applied to soften the washer.

One entirely new body style takes its place in the line, supplanting the Imperial Landau. It is the convertible landau sedan on which the top rear quarter may be completely folded down. The commercial line embraces a new and larger utility truck of one and one half ton capacity, a new light delivery chassis and the sedan delivery, a de luxe panelled body truck.

Care Should Be Used In Parking Machine On Hill

Motorists should bear in mind that brakes do not hold as well the first thing in the morning as they do later in the day. This should be remembered when parking on a hill, warns the California State Automobile association. Due to heat and cold expanding and contracting metal, the brakes expend with use. Then when the car is parked on a hill, contraction may permit it to start moving and result in an accident. Wheels should be blocked against the curb and the car left in gear opposite to the direction of the downward grade.

Proper Lights Winter's Need

Properly adjusted and legal headlights protect the car owner, pedestrians and other motorists alike, points out the public safety department of the California State Automobile association. Glaring headlights blind other drivers and pedestrians as well. With the shortening of daylight hours, all motorists will act wisely if they check their lights to make sure they are properly adjusted.

Figures compiled for ten large American cities by the American Automobile association, with which the State association is affiliated, show that from three to five percent of all night-time accidents are traceable to faulty headlights, and usually the defect was found to be glare caused by improper focus.

The first automobile show to be held in Utah in several years is being planned at Salt Lake City, according to word received by the National Automobile club.

When Better Automobiles Are Built... Buick Will Build Them

BAN URGED ON WINDSHIELD STICKERS

Under modern traffic conditions the operator of an automobile must have a clear vision of the road ahead of him and of intersections to the left or right at all times. With his windshield, side wings and windows obstructed by stickers advertising everything from bathing suits to political candidates this is impossible.

The public safety department of the California State Automobile association expresses the hope that the next California legislature will see the wisdom of adopting a law to eliminate this dangerous practice.

Fourteen states in the Union have prohibited the pasting of signs, posters and other non-transparent material on the windshields, side wings and windows of automobiles.

These states are New York, Arizona, District of Columbia, Connecticut, Idaho, Michigan, Minnesota, North Carolina, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin.

In the interest of public safety all states in the Union should adopt similar laws.

Eight In 100 Drivers Ask Aid

An average of eight in every 100 motorists each month meets travel difficulties on street or highway requiring mechanical first aid or towing service, according to the records of the California State Automobile association. The free emergency road service for members of the motorists' organization answered 6,611 calls for service last month, the records show. The association has 80,000 members.

Many States Plan Road Development

Nearly a quarter of a billion dollars was voted in highway bonds in four states last election day, according to reports received by the California State Automobile association.

States voting bonds for highway improvement were as follows: Louisiana, $20,000,000; Iowa, $100,000,000; Missouri, $75,000,000; West Virginia, $35,000,000. Colorado and Pennsylvania turned down large bond issues at the polls.

Louisiana in addition to voting a bond issue of $20,000,000 raised its gas tax to four cents a gallon. California is listed among the states where the cause of motorway improvement is favored in the election by adoption of a bond issue for preservation of the state's scenic and historic motorway attractions. This was the $6,000,000 state parks bond issue, endorsed and supported by the California State Automobile association and other organizations.

Perhaps the most significant of the bond issues before the voters was the $75,000,000 issue in Missouri. It provides for completion of the 7,540 mile highway system in a state with a strategic location in the nation's network and assures widening of roads in the congested areas around St. Louis and Kansas City.

In Iowa the big bond issue will mean the improving of the 6,600 miles of the state's primary highway system, while $60,000,000 of the indebtedness voted by 61 counties will be taken over by the bond issue.

100,000 Danger Signs To Be Placed

The state of Texas is planning installation of 100,000 warning signs on its highways, according to the California State Automobile association.

"UNTHINKING" DRIVERS SCORED

The automatic, unthinking type of driver is not looked upon with any degree of favor by the various authorities in the United States who are in daily contact with the motoring public, says Harry T. Healy, assistant general manager of the National Automobile club.

The reason for this is not far to see, declares Healy. It lies in the fact that this type of driver has his thoughts anywhere but on the matter in hand and hence is far more apt to have a fatal accident than the one who has his mind on his driving. "Take the case of the man who has perfected his driving to the point of being virtually automatic," says Healy, "he will be thinking more of his business problems than of his driving. He has trained himself to believe that he will instinctively do the right thing at the right time in case of an emergency."

"But will he? That is the question. The trouble is that his mind may be so far away that he cannot bring it back in the fraction of time necessary to prevent a serious accident. He may be wool gathering so far ahead that the accident is over long before he knows about it, if he ever does."

"Authorities are agreed that it is not always the automatic driver who is either the safest or best driver. He has too much confidence in his automatic mental and physical reactions and so pays too little attention to the job in hand. "For instance, take the man who drives over the same route to and from his place of business day after day. He knows its every twist and turn and he believes that there is nothing in all that distance from his home to his office that he is not thoroughly familiar with. And in a sense that is true."

"As a result of that familiarity there is bred a feeling of certainty and perhaps a contempt for possible dangers. He believes that because he has never had any accidents that he never will have. Finally this familiarity and resultant contempt lulls him into a feeling of security."

"The upshot of the whole matter is that gradually he permits his business problems to occupy his thoughts to the exclusion of everything else. Or perhaps he is mentally replaying his last golf game and working out his score in future foursums with his cronies at the golf club."

"In the midst of all this he is suddenly confronted with a totally new condition on his route of travel. It is something that even subconsciously he has never had presented to him before. His conscious mind, having traveled far afield, cannot instantly bring itself back to meet the emergency. The result is a hideous accident. "The best and safest driver is he who has his mind on his driving and his eyes on the road before him, ever alert to meet any emergency that may arise. All authorities are agreed on this."

Good Highways Aid To Farmer

Improved highways in the rural districts constitute a factor that is being given considerable more consideration in the problem of farm relief. Through better roads the farmer can be brought in closer touch with urban centers.

Figures reported to the California State Automobile association from a nation-wide survey conducted by the American Automobile association show that with 5,000,000 or more than one-fifth of all motor vehicles farm-owned, only 7.5 percent of all farms are located on macadam, brick or concrete highways.

"While it is true," says the A. A. A., "that the Federal-aid system has done much to connect up important highways and make educational facilities and modern conveniences available to the rural resident, there is still a great need for connecting roads in the national network of highways."

TOOL KIT HELD ADJUNCT OF MOTORING

The tool kit is one of the most important adjuncts to perfect motoring that a car owner can carry with him on his trips about the state, in the opinion of Louis G. Shaw, general service manager of the National Automobile club. Shaw should know, because he has had a few experiences in that line in the many years he has been motoring.

Take the case of a simple tire change somewhere along the road. Now changing tires Shaw argues is not a difficult business in this day and age, and certainly a big hulking driver should not have any trouble in making a change. Besides, a National Automobile club member can always call a club service car.

But—and here is the big but—if you haven't got the proper wrenches it is not the simplest thing in the world to get the old tire off and put on the new one. Besides this, Shaw says, there are not a few motorists who forget to bring a jack along and then depend on the chance of being able to borrow one from a passing motorist in case of trouble.

Shaw tells this one on himself. Not so long ago he was out on a rush inspection trip and found himself on a little used road, parked along the roadside with a flat tire. He wasn't particularly put out over this because that can happen to anyone. And besides, he can change tires with the best of them.

When he came to look for his tools, however, he found he'd used the jack in the garage back home and had forgotten to put it back. And that wasn't all. A search for the proper wrenches revealed that these too, had been inadvertently left behind.

There was Shaw sitting on the running board when the nearest N. A. C. service car reached him. One of his own service cars at that. The "wheecracks" Shaw heard from that mechanic were not so funny to him, but they had the effect of making him far more careful not to run the same risk in the future. Now, Shaw declares he inspects his tool kit before he takes his car out of the garage for a trip into the wilds.

Reckless Drivers Responsible For Numerous Crashes

Police courts are crowded, according to legal department of the National Automobile club, with litigation of reckless driving charges founded upon investigations of traffic accidents. It is the custom of the authorities to determine to their satisfaction the degree of negligence causing the accident, and if the parties have been careless, to proceed with the charges. This does not mean that only the party most negligent is charged. Often both drivers are extremely careless and in such instances both are held. Reasonable care will prevent an untold number of such traffic troubles.

Gasoline In Oil Calls For Change Of Lubrication

A full crankcase in your car is no assurance that a change of oil may not be advisable, warns the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile association. Unexploded gasoline may be causing dilution, the oil consumed may be thus replaced and the entire mixture so thinned that a change is necessary.

Several states in the union have authorized their motor vehicle departments to refuse license plates to cars that are mechanically defective, according to information reaching the National Automobile club.

DRIVES OVER SIDESWALKS DANGEROUS

"Sidewalk grade crossings" constitute a hazard in the daily life of thousands of children, particularly as the season of new toys approaches. "Sidewalk grade crossings" are the driveways leading to public or private garages and the menace to youngsters of cars backing out such driveways is emphasized in the school safety lessons for this month distributed to classrooms throughout northern and central California by the Public Safety department of the California State Automobile association. More than 12,000 copies of a poster that is particularly appropriate to the holiday season when new coasters, scooters, and other toy vehicles make their appearance, have been distributed to schools by the motorists' organization. The poster illustrates the hazard of children playing around garage driveways and is accompanied by a suggested talk by teachers which reads as follows:

"Millions of dollars are being spent annually in these United States to eliminate railroad grade crossings. These large expenditures of money are necessary because experience has shown that every grade crossing, even upon a view and protected by signs and signal devices, is a potential source of danger to motorists."

"Driveways leading into public or private garages are 'sidewalk grade crossings' and are even more dangerous than highway grade crossings because of their greater number and the absence of warning devices. Many entrances to public and private garages are so constructed that the motorist must back his car up an incline in order to reach the street. Obviously he has difficulty in seeing that the way is clear and the pedestrian in hearing the horn of his car when blown inside the garage. Particularly is it difficult for the motorists to anticipate that a child riding a coaster or scooter or running in play, is behind his car just as he backs the machine out. He may have looked back and found the way clear a moment before. He may even have been failed to have looked back at all. The result however is the same."

"In riding your scooter or coaster in playing or just walking on the sidewalk 'play safe' when you find an open garage door. Think of an open garage door or a driveway obstructed from your view by a hedge, shrubbery, fence or building as a 'blind grade crossing.' Do what the 'safe motorist' does on the highway at such crossings—'Stop—Look—Listen.' It takes but a minute and proves you are alert to danger and therefore an intelligent boy or girl."

Motor Club Road Sign Truck Busy

Road-sign trucks of the California State Automobile association traveled 10,615 miles last month in maintaining, repairing and installing units of the yellow-diamond road-sign system in northern and central California. The association bears the entire cost of maintenance and repair on this system and has invested close to $500,000 of its members' funds in this system. Six hundred and seventy new signs were erected last month, 236 replaced, 4431 cleaned, 2725 repaired and 370 removed.

Inspect Gas Line Drivers Warned

Before attempting to adjust the carburetor on your car, check the gas lines for obstruction, and make sure that the gas tank has a good supply of gasoline, advises the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile association. If the gas supply is low, sediment, water, etc. will be drawn through the lines, making a correct adjustment impossible.

Repairs For Gas Gauge Explained

If the gasoline gauge on your car does not register, remove the cork float from the gas tank, dry out thoroughly and treat with a good coat of shellac, suggests the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile association. If the cork is badly pitted, use a new cork.

Carry Chains Drivers Told

Motorists traversing dirt roads or any roads in the mountain areas are advised to carry tire chains at this season of the year, advises the touring bureau of the California State Automobile association.

Crossing Crashes On Big Increase

Highway grade crossing accidents caused by automobiles running into the side of trains are continuing to increase at an alarming rate, reports the California State Automobile association. More than 20 percent of such accidents were caused in this manner in 1927.

Oregon Follows Uniform Code

Oregon is one of the 13 states which have adopted motor vehicle laws conform closely to the Uniform Motor Vehicle code, according to the California State Automobile association.

Many Miles Of New Trails To Be Installed

Plans for the transportation system in national forests of the country during the next ten years contemplate a completed system of 51,268 miles of road and 110,385 miles of trails, according to the California State Automobile association.

Fan Blade Change May Help Motor

Changing the fan blades on your car to permit greater suction of air may greatly improve the condition of your engine treating after all other conditions have been checked, according to the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile association.

23 Cities' Car Death Toll Low

Twenty three cities in the United States had less motor vehicle fatalities in September of this year compared with the same month last year, according to the public safety department of the California State Automobile association. These were in the 100,000 population or over class.

Stickers on Car Windshield Banned

Thirteen states have laws which prevent the pasting of signs or stickers on the windshields of automobiles, according to the California State Automobile association.

Studebaker's Pledge to the Public on Used Car Sales

We sell USED cars on the same basis as we sell NEW cars—ONE PRICE—THE SAME PRICE TO ALL. Every car honestly represented and honestly priced. You can buy any one of our fine used cars under the protection of the Studebaker Pledge—and know you have made an investment in a quality car that will last longer, give infinitely more satisfaction, riding comfort, and power than a new car of cheap construction and uncertain life. Measure used car value by the Studebaker Pledge.

No matter what make of used car you intend to buy you can afford to purchase without first seeing our fine selection of open and closed models, painted in popular and striking color combinations, and backed by the Pledge that is your protection.

1—All used cars offered to the public shall be honestly represented. If a car is suitable only for a mechanic, who can rebuild it, or for some one who expects only a few months' rough usage on a camping trip, it must be sold on that basis. Each car must be sold for just what it is.

2—All Studebaker automobiles which are sold as CERTIFIED CARS have been properly reconditioned, and carry a 30-day guarantee for replacement of defective parts and free service on adjustments.

This is possible because tremendous reserve mileage has been built into every Studebaker, which it is impossible to exhaust in years.

3—Every used car is conspicuously marked with its price, in plain figures, and that price, just as the price of our new cars, is rigidly maintained.

The public can deal in confidence and safety only with the dealer whose policy is "one price only—the same price to all." For to sell cars on this basis, every one of them must be honestly priced to begin with.

4—Every purchaser of a used car may drive it for three days, and then, if not satisfied for any reason, turn it back and apply the money paid as a credit on the purchase of any other car in stock—new or used.

It is assumed, of course, that the car has not been smashed up by collision or other accident in the meantime.

Not only to the public, but also to The Studebaker Corporation of America, whose cars we sell, we pledge adherence to the above policy in selling used cars.

Gift Car Is A Sign of Thrift

"No doleful thoughts about the penalty of extravagance come to cloud the Christmas joys of the family that gets a new car for Christmas."

"The Christmas car more than anything else has helped to make Yuletide cheer a year 'round pleasure. In the first place the Christmas car is worth what it costs. A dollar spent for an automobile buys more than a dollar spent for anything else money will buy. There is full value in the first instance."

"Then there are days, months, and even years of continued satisfaction, pleasure and convenience. The car justifies itself every day, brings new opportunities to all who use it and a larger measure of life to all who share it."

"And nobody notices the absence of other gifts when Christmas morning reveals a new car at the door."

ALICE WHITE DANCES FOR N. Y. MAYOR

You can't keep a good show girl down. She'll insist on strutting her stuff whenever she has a distinguished audience and how!

Alice White demonstrated it on the first national lot, during the visit of Mayor Jimmy Walker, of New York, the celebrated executive of the world's greatest city who was once generally referred to by a columnist as "New York's night mayor." At any rate Mayor Walker has a reputation of knowing his night clubs and the people of the theatrical world who populate them.

"What's this," said Walker when he saw the complete cabaret set on one of the stages where the "show girl" which comes to the California theater tomorrow for two days, was being fitted, with Alice White as the featured play-

"We'll put on our show for you," said Alice and Samell in one breath. At a signal an orchestra on the stage burst forth. The extras on the set rose and soon were swaying on the dance floor. Then Alice White, in a white wig and an Argentine costume, came out of the wings in company with Donald Reed, dressed in a similar costume. Together they danced through a beautiful performance of the tango.

Mayor Walker clapped his hands enthusiastically.

"Why," he said, "I don't even need to go back to New York. This is just as good as anything they have there!"

APACHE DANCE IN FILM HERE

The Apache dance performed by Margie Livingston and Don Alvarado in the Columbia production coming to the California theater on Sunday entitled "The Apache," originally created a sensation in the cafes of Paris.

Unknown to each other, Miss Livingston and Alvarado were in Paris at the time the dance was at its height. Scouting the advantage it would give them in future motion picture productions to be able to execute the difficult number, the two took lessons from the pair that originated it. In a few lessons the stars were equal to their teachers.

Neither Miss Livingston nor Alvarado had occasion to perform the dance after returning to America. The roles assigned were of an entirely different nature than the Apache and gradually the knowledge of the dance sank into the subconscious.

When the pair was signed by Columbia for the leading roles in "The Apache," the dance popped in to the conscious mind. Neither was aware that the other knew it and both simultaneously commenced.

"Some years ago while traveling in Paris,"

Seeing that both were trying to talk at once, Alvarado relinquished the floor to the lady and Miss Livingston related the story of learning the famous dance. Alvarado burst out laughing. He too had been a pupil at the same time and each had been informed by their crafty teachers that he or she was the only person outside of the originators to know the step.

Warner Richmond, Philo McCullough and Edna Mae Cooper complete the cast of "The Apache." The story was written by Ramon Romero and adapted to the screen by Harriet Hinsdale.

COMEDIANS TO FEATURE NEW PLAY TODAY

A delightfully debauched house cat, answering to the name of Genevieve, wandering aimlessly about the stage of the California theater today is the center of interest in "Ain't Aggie Auf?" the newest laugh fest offered by Nat Holt's Comedians.

In selecting "The merry farce from the pen of Earl Baldwin, Nat Holt has picked an ideal vehicle to display the ability of his new ingenue, Miss Ruby Rossiana, popular in musical comedy circles on the Pacific slope and direct from a long engagement in Los Angeles.

In the role of "Aggie" the happy-go-lucky flapper, Miss Rossiana will have an excellent chance to win the approval of Richmond theatergoers and will be assisted by the popular cast of funmakers, including Bobby Fitzsimmons, Jimmie Edwards, Mabel Gardner, Florence Sumner, Jack Kirkwood and Jack Wahlert.

Something in the way of a treat has been promised by Mr. Holt for the following week, when his company will present "The play with everything," "The Mystery House." Groans, thrills, chills, murders, screams and laughs are guaranteed in plenty. Watch for the "Mystery House" next week.

The feature photoplay for Sunday will be "The Apache."

SYNOPSIS
Dr. Davis, recently married to May Davis, is having lunch with Joe Babbitt and his friend, Myra, when Babbitt is called away. May happens into the same hotel and is furious at seeing her husband with a girl. After explanations, Davis and May make up. Myra, just naturally flirtatious, decides to further the acquaintance with Davis and goes to his office to be vaccinated. She is discovered by May and Beranger-de Brie, a perfumer, who is returning some gloves Myra left in his shop. Another quarrel; another reconciliation. Davis is called on a case; only to find Babbitt and Myra, who pretends the vaccination is hurting.

"I'll take her home, if she likes," Ollie Lee put in.

"Do you want me to take you home, darling?" Vivienne came over and put her arm around Myra.

"Oh, no thanks. Doctor, please take me home. I need medical attention—there's something the matter."

"There can't be anything the matter," Davis put in brusquely. "It's taking its natural course, that's all."

"But you don't know how it hurts, doctor," Myra answered.

"Sure, I'll be blown!" Babbitt whistled.

"Joey, dear," Vivienne informed him laughingly, "the longer you live the less you'll ever understand us girls."

CHAPTER X

As fast as her feet would carry her, May ran to the garage around the corner where she kept her own little runabout. Nodding briefly to the watchman on duty she found her car, jumped in and backed it out into the street. She started to ask the watchman if he knew where Sundon Street was, and then decided that discretion was the better part of valor. If she was starting on a wild-goose chase, there was no need to divulge her destination to the man, who would be able to tell her husband, in case he returned and tried to find her whereabouts, that she had asked about this place. She stepped on the accelerator and sped off.

Flying recklessly past street corners, swerving around slower moving motors, now edging alongside a car, now passing it, she went on until she came to more crowded sections of the city. Streets glittered brilliantly with moving slogans of light, store windows bright with electricity sped past her, shattered by heavy drawn blinds like closed eyes slumbered. At a convenient corner May drew up and questioned the traffic officer concerning Sundon Street. With one glance once in her mind, she started off again, her hand, a determined clin thrust slightly forward.

"I'll show him, she was repeating to herself, "I'll show Mr. Edward Davis. There's one thing I won't be and that's deceived. It's cheap and common. Well, maybe what I'm doing's cheap and common, but at least I'll know—there goes the red light. No heavy traffic yet; I ought to be there in fifteen minutes. Ed must think I'm a fool—there goes the green light. But I've got to find out—I've simply got to find out. I can't go to turn the corner—well, why doesn't he hold his hand out—that was a narrow escape. I've got to find out whether he's really out with someone or not."

It's silly, all this business of being jealous of someone, but I can't help it. I'm too much in love with Ed, that's the trouble—O, look, that red light! Wonder how much further this place is—wonder if it's village—not too far over on the East side for that. Maybe he's not there, anyhow, maybe he put that address down just to fool me, maybe—the green light. I ought to be almost there by now. What if I do find him with someone else, what'm I going to do about it, anyhow? I do wish people wouldn't cut so close when they drive—they almost cut the car off the side of the road. Here's where I turn.

Down the side street she turned, following the same route taken by Davis earlier in the evening. At last Sundon Street, and May pulled up near the corner where she was seeking. She leaned out of the window and looked around. A Chinese restaurant, that was 528. Well it didn't look particularly inviting. What a strange place to meet anyone. She noticed the cars parked along the curb and inspected them. She sat bolt upright. There was Ed's car, mistaking it—she had carefully memorized the license number. So he was here, after all.

someone with me who knows what to do for me. Goodbye, everybody," she called feebly over her shoulder. "Call me tomorrow, Vivienne, will you?"

"I'll give you a ring about twelve, dear," Vivienne answered. "Good night, and I hope you'll feel better."

"Good-night—good-night—out the door, Vivienne, laugh softly. "What are you laughing at, Viv?" Babbitt turned to the girl, frowning. "It's a rotten shame Myra feels so bad. I didn't know she'd been vaccinated. Why, what's the matter?" he looked from Vivienne to Ollie Lee as he saw them both grinning at each other.

"So you were on, too, Ollie," Vivienne giggled.

"On to what?" Babbitt persisted. "I wouldn't have been, if it hadn't been for the way you talked, I don't think," Ollie Lee returned. "What're you talking about?"

"Oh, you poor, dear, simple soul," Vivienne answered. "Couldn't you see that Myra was shamming?"

"Shamming?" Babbitt was puzzled.

"She's no more sick than I am," the girl retorted.

"Well, but—what th—didn't she have any vaccination?"

"Sure she did," Vivienne explained. "She went to Dr. Davis's office this afternoon and told him a good story about having a case of diphtheria or something next door, and got him to vaccinate her. But she's all right. That was a good bluff. She started to go to try something when she let him go so easily. I just couldn't help getting in my dirty digs—it was so obvious."

"Well, I'll be blown!" Babbitt whistled.

"Joey, dear," Vivienne informed him laughingly, "the longer you live the less you'll ever understand us girls."

"Do you want me to take you home, darling?" Vivienne came over and put her arm around Myra.

"Oh, no thanks. Doctor, please take me home. I need medical attention—there's something the matter."

"There can't be anything the matter," Davis put in brusquely. "It's taking its natural course, that's all."

"But you don't know how it hurts, doctor," Myra answered.

"Sure, I'll be blown!" Babbitt whistled.

"Joey, dear," Vivienne informed him laughingly, "the longer you live the less you'll ever understand us girls."

CHAPTER X

As fast as her feet would carry her, May ran to the garage around the corner where she kept her own little runabout. Nodding briefly to the watchman on duty she found her car, jumped in and backed it out into the street. She started to ask the watchman if he knew where Sundon Street was, and then decided that discretion was the better part of valor. If she was starting on a wild-goose chase, there was no need to divulge her destination to the man, who would be able to tell her husband, in case he returned and tried to find her whereabouts, that she had asked about this place. She stepped on the accelerator and sped off.

Flying recklessly past street corners, swerving around slower moving motors, now edging alongside a car, now passing it, she went on until she came to more crowded sections of the city. Streets glittered brilliantly with moving slogans of light, store windows bright with electricity sped past her, shattered by heavy drawn blinds like closed eyes slumbered. At a convenient corner May drew up and questioned the traffic officer concerning Sundon Street. With one glance once in her mind, she started off again, her hand, a determined clin thrust slightly forward.

"I'll show him, she was repeating to herself, "I'll show Mr. Edward Davis. There's one thing I won't be and that's deceived. It's cheap and common. Well, maybe what I'm doing's cheap and common, but at least I'll know—there goes the red light. No heavy traffic yet; I ought to be there in fifteen minutes. Ed must think I'm a fool—there goes the green light. But I've got to find out—I've simply got to find out. I can't go to turn the corner—well, why doesn't he hold his hand out—that was a narrow escape. I've got to find out whether he's really out with someone or not."

It's silly, all this business of being jealous of someone, but I can't help it. I'm too much in love with Ed, that's the trouble—O, look, that red light! Wonder how much further this place is—wonder if it's village—not too far over on the East side for that. Maybe he's not there, anyhow, maybe he put that address down just to fool me, maybe—the green light. I ought to be almost there by now. What if I do find him with someone else, what'm I going to do about it, anyhow? I do wish people wouldn't cut so close when they drive—they almost cut the car off the side of the road. Here's where I turn.

Down the side street she turned, following the same route taken by Davis earlier in the evening. At last Sundon Street, and May pulled up near the corner where she was seeking. She leaned out of the window and looked around. A Chinese restaurant, that was 528. Well it didn't look particularly inviting. What a strange place to meet anyone. She noticed the cars parked along the curb and inspected them. She sat bolt upright. There was Ed's car, mistaking it—she had carefully memorized the license number. So he was here, after all.
